Immunization Awareness Month!!

Vaccines are an important part of your pet's overall wellbeing. "No medical development has had a greater impact on the prevention of diseases and general health of people and animals than the development of vaccines against various diseases," says Michael Paul, DVM, and past president of the American Animal Hospital Association (AAHA). Vaccines trigger a protective immune response that will produce antibodies in your pet. These antibodies will help in future fights against specific disease-causing infections.

There are 3 main factors in deciding which vaccinations your pets should receive: age, geography, and lifestyle. Ask our staff which ones are right for your pet!
